We've grown up mocking the common saying "The Egyptian child is the smartest," but, upon seeing the countless examples of this living proof, we must reconsider our doubts. Among the many leading examples that many people look up to, is the Egyptian student Yasmeen Mustafa. Her impressive achievements and contributions, considering her skills from a young age, as well as the challenging obstacles she grew up in, are just part of her story. She defied the stereotypes in our society. Her unlimited potential has enabled her to go beyond the scope of our planet, deep into the abyss of outer space.

Back in 2015, Yasmeen landed first place globally in the "Intel Science and Engineering Competition," in the Earth and Environmental Sciences category, with her project entitled "The Potential Strength of Rice Straw." The competition consisted of 1,700 contestants from more than 87 countries, and the committee was composed of several Nobel Prize winning scientists, making Yasmeen the only Arab girl to receive such an award since its launch many years ago. Yasmeen's project included methods of cleaning and disinfecting water sources first, then converting them to solve the problem of electricity, and reducing air pollution. In her project, she used a biological treatment to help purify and heat water by burning rice straw, and her scientific research is to increase biodiesel fuel in generating electricity. Moreover, NASA has also named a group of asteroids "MOUSTAFA 31910," after her family name, in a gesture of appreciating her continual efforts and contributions to the field of Earth and Environmental Sciences. Not to mention that Yasmeen was only 17 years old during that time. The achievements don't stop here, as Heinemann, a publishing house, contacted her three years ago with a keen interest for her in creating a book, and include details of her scientific career and her story. The book was recently printed in a narrative context. Over one million copies were printed and distributed to schools and universities, as a unique model for students to learn from, inspiring younger generations to follow the path. She's such a role model for other young Egyptians.

A stereotype is a fixed idea that people have about what specific social groups or individuals are like, especially an idea that is wrong. Other terms that are associated with the term stereotype are prejudice and cliché. Because stereotypes are standardized and simplified ideas of groups, based on some prejudices, they are not derived from objective facts, but rather subjective ideas. The existence of stereotypes may be explained by the need of groups of people to view themselves as more superior than other groups. Consequently, stereotypes may be used to justify ill-founded prejudices or ignorance and prevent people of stereotyped groups from entering or succeeding in various activities or fields. The stereotyping group are, generally, reluctant to reconsider their attitudes and behavior towards stereotyped group.

Stereotypes may affect people negatively. This includes forming inaccurate and distorted images and opinions of people. Stereotypes may also be used for scapegoating or for making general judgments about people. One of the most amazing and influential libraries in the world, is the Bibliotheca Alexandria. It is one of Egypt's most important contemporary landmarks and the cultural heart of the city. It (was) opened in 2002 and it can hold eight million books. But we have had libraries for thousands of years. Probably the oldest library that you can still visit is al-Qarawiyyin Library in Morocco. The daughter of a trader established the library in 859 CE. However, people had collected books a long time before this. Archeologists have found writings on collections of papyrus in Amarna and Thebes from around 1300 BCE. The ancient Greeks had libraries where they kept thousands of original books. The famous library of Alexandria opened in around 300 BCE. The aim of this library was to have one of each of the world's books, although books were then made of papyrus or leather. Before 1450, people had written books for the first time. Many universities also started to open, and most of these had important libraries. The rulers of many countries understood the importance of books to people's education and began to open national libraries. Now there are many very famous national libraries around the world. The British Library opened in 1753 as part of the British Museum and is one of the largest libraries in the world. It keeps one of all the books, magazines, newspapers and maps printed in Britain. By 1988, there were so many of these that it had to move to a new, bigger building.

Today, you can also use digital libraries, where thousands of books and magazines are available to people online. El-Alamein is a town on Egypt's Mediterranean coast. It's known for a decisive 1942 WWII battle, commemorated in El Alamein War Museum with uniforms and tanks. New Alamein lies on the Mediterranean Sea, approximately 85 km west of Borg El Arab International Airport. Still under construction, New Alamein was conceived by the Egyptian government as a center for tourism, education, and government. The city has its own presidential palace and ministry building. Construction is ongoing at New Alamein for three universities, fifteen skyscrapers and high towers, and 10,000 hotel rooms. As of 2007, it had a population of 7,397 inhabitants. El Alamein has a war museum with artifacts from North African battles.

Visitors can also go to the Italian and German military cemeteries on Tel el-Eisa Hill outside the town. The Egyptian government intends for New Alamein to bring large numbers of tourists to the Mediterranean beaches of the northwest coast. The government asserts that approximately 30 developers have been granted permits to move forward with the construction of hotels for 30,000 rooms. Many of these units are in high-rise buildings along the beach, with towers already under construction including The North Edge Towers and The Gate projects. Other centers of activity in New Alamein will include three universities and a "city of culture and arts" to encompass a Roman Theater, studio complexes, an opera hall, and a cinema complex. A CV is the abbreviation for the Latin phrase 'curriculum vitae', which means "course of life". It is a detailed document highlighting your professional and academic history. CVs typically include information like education, work experience, achievements and awards, scholarships or grants you've earned, coursework, research projects, publications of your work, skills and credentials. If you need help determining how to write a CV, it can be helpful to consult a template. You send it to employers when you are looking for a job. A CV is also called 'resume' in American English. A CV and a resume are similar in that they're both documents that summarize your professional history, education, skills and achievements. They're also both documents you might provide an employer for consideration for an open position.

It is important to note that in the United States and most of Europe, resumes and CVs are not interchangeable. A resume is a shorter-form document that provides a concise overview of your previous roles, skills and details about your education. A CV, on the other hand, is typically a longer, more detailed document focused largely on academic coursework and research. There are a few exceptions, however. In India, South Africa and Australia, the terms CV and resume are interchangeable.

But how can you write a simple CV? There are certain steps for writing a simple CV: First of all you have to include your contact information which includes your full name, home address, phone number and your email address. Next, you include your DOB; your date of birth. After that you write down your nationality. Then detail your academic history in reverse-chronological order. This can include your post-doctoral programs, graduate school, undergraduate school and high school. Only include your most recent two educational experiences. Record your professional experience. List the company or organization, job title and dates employed starting with your most recent job. List your job duties, experience gained and achievements; don't forget to list honors and awards if there are any. Include relevant skills and qualifications; this can be in a separate skills section. Reread the job description to highlight the most important skills employers are looking for. These can include both hard and soft skills that make you the best candidate for the job. Some employers, especially post-secondary institutions, may offer their own CV template and CV examples to help make sure you include all required information in the format they prefer. Before you submit your application, look for any special CV guidelines the employer has outlined.

CHOOSE the best answer from a, b, c or d

A national anthem is a patriotic musical composition symbolizing and evoking eulogies of the history and traditions of a country or nation. Every culture has its own traditional folk music. Most folk music has a purpose. It may describe important historical events or to help people get through their day's work or to sing babies to sleep. The most important piece of music in this culture is its national anthem. Egypt's first national anthem dated back to 1869 when a royal anthem was composed to honor the monarch. It is unclear how long this was in use. Although the monarchy was deposed in the revolution of 1952, the anthem was used as part of the anthem of the United Arab Republic with Syria in 1958. The Egyptian national anthem instills loyalty and patriotism.

Belady, Belady has been the Egyptian anthem since it was written by Muhammad Yunus al-Qadi and musically composed by Sayyid Darwish. Every morning, Egyptian students across the nation stand up straight in their school morning lines or rows to salute Egypt's flag and chant the Egyptian national anthem. The Egyptian flag and national anthem have expressed the identity, pride and belief of the Egyptian citizen throughout the country's history. The national anthem, Belady Belady, is a true example of our Egyptian folk music.

'Digital Egypt' is the new title for Egypt in the new era. Egypt has been adopting a robust strategy and strong course of action in transforming the existing government services and community ecosystem to an entirely digital and data driven ecosystem, to provide public services in a faster and simpler way. MCIT cooperates with all sectors of the state to achieve digital transformation through two pillars: services provided to citizens and improvement of government performance.

In alignment with Egypt Vision 2030, and Egypt's digital transformation strategy, the Ministry of Communications and Information Technology has embarked on building Digital Egypt. Digital Egypt is an all-encompassing vision and plan, laying the foundations for the transformation of Egypt into a digital society. All public services are to be provided to citizens digitally nationwide. Egyptian citizens, anywhere in the country, will be able to receive these services in a digital format. Several methods of online payment of service fees were made available. There are many amazing works of transportation around the world, both ancient and modern. As the biggest and most densely populated city in Africa, and the Arab World, the need for a metro in Greater Cairo was strong. In 1987 that population stood at 10 million residents, not counting the two million or so commuters who came into Cairo every day for different reasons. The first line in Cairo was opened in 1987 as Line 1 from Helwan in the south of Cairo to New El Marg in the north with a length of 44 kilometres. As of August 2020, the Cairo Metro has 75 stations. The system consists of three operational lines numbered from 1 to 3. As of 2013, the metro carried nearly 4 million passengers per day.

And for the most recent means of transport is the Cairo Monorail project; a monorail system made of extruded aluminum panels, the trains are corrosion-resistant and recyclable. The monorail project will include a 54km line connecting the New Administrative City with East Cairo and a second 42km line connecting the 6th of October City with Giza. Cairo Monorail will have the capacity to transport approximately 45,000 passengers an hour in each direction at full capacity.

Travel time will be 60 minutes for the 54km New Administrative City line and 42 minutes for the 42km 6th of October City line. The project will involve the construction of two monorail lines, which will create the first public transport connection from both the New Capital City and the 6th of October City to the Greater Cairo area.

Overpopulation refers to an undesirable condition in which the number of existing human being exceeds the actual carrying capacity of the earth. It has many causes which range from a decline in the death rate to early marriages. The ill-effects of overpopulation are quite severe. The first one is that natural resources are depleted at a faster level. Our planet can produce only a limited amount of water and food. Thus, overpopulation causes environmental damage including deforestation and pollution. There is the degradation of the environment which happens because of the overuse of resources like coal, oil, natural gases and others. As a result, the quality of air also gets affected in this manner. In developing countries, overpopulation puts a strain on resources. Thus, it gives rise to conflicts and tension. It also causes more diseases that become harder to control.

As a clear result of overpopulation, we have the issue of unemployment; there is more number of people than job opportunities. As a result, unemployment gives rise to crimes like theft and murder. We also have pandemics and epidemics which happen due to overpopulation. Most importantly, we have a shortage of water which makes it tougher for people to get access to clean water. We also witness faster climate change as nations continue to develop their industrial capacities. Thus, they emit industrial waste which leads to global temperatures. There are many solutions which we may take up to prevent overpopulation. The best measure is family planning to keep the overpopulation check. In order to do that, one can ensure proper spacing between the births of the children. Most importantly, it is essential to empower women so they can break out of poverty. This way, they can learn about reproductive health and make better decisions. All in all, overpopulation is no less than a curse that poses a true threat to the development of any country.

According to the United Nations, there will be almost 10 billion people in the world by 2050. As a result, we will have to increase our food production by about 70 percent. However, farmers do not have space to keep more livestock and grow more crops. Instead, they'll need to look for more sustainable solutions and this will involve producing a wider variety of food. How would you feel about eating a burger that was grown in a laboratory? Scientists think that it could be more sustainable than keeping livestock. Some of the people who have eaten these burgers say that they can't tell the difference between the new burgers and real meat. Researchers from the United Nations have found that some kinds of agriculture are seriously damaging the land. This is not sustainable. If farming continues to cause so much damage, there won't be enough land left for food production. In Europe, most of the damage is due to farmers using too many chemicals, so they will need to find new ways to help their crops grow without having to use so many chemicals. In southern Africa, the problem is that there is too much rain in the summer. In the future, we can expect that farmers in southern Africa will be using innovations in technology to remove water from the land and use it elsewhere.

Some people are born with great strengths in education, cognitive skills, and independency, but there are many that are born with lower IQ and lower skills in adaptive behavior. Special needs is a term that refers to people who require assistance for disabilities that may be physical, mental, or psychological. This doesn't make their lives different from others in the sense that they still desire the same things in life that others without this disability attempt to achieve. Numerous times however, people will look at the disabled with a sense of pity or weakness. The disabled need to be included in media because they deserve to be seen as equals. The disabled are not seen in the American culture as would another without a disability would be represented.

In the last decade, the culture of volunteering and carrying out community projects that extend beyond charity have grown in many different and diverse ways. Egypt has recently witnessed remarkable progress in the field of supporting and empowering people of determination, as a result of the supportive political will that sought to create an appropriate space and climate for the concerted efforts of all segments of society, including academic and legislative institutions, and others, to support people of determination and special abilities.

The International Day of People with Special needs falls on December 3 of each year. It is an international day designated by the United Nations since 1992 to support people with disabilities. It aims to increase understanding of disability issues and work to solve them. This year, we cannot talk about this special day, without reviewing the most important achievements of this category over the past years, after years in which people with special needs suffered from exclusion and marginalization, to come June 30 as a course correction for many files, and a new era of interest and empowerment for people with determination begins.

People with disabilities should be treated normally, just as you treat your friend, and how your friend treats you. Nobody likes being treated differently. All they want is your respect and kindness. These little details can affect their thoughts and lives!

During the modern era, exciting new innovations in the world of building construction has brought soaring skyscrapers and fresh new approaches to building design. Actually since many years ago, building construction has been a significant part of our industrial field. If somebody asks what the most significant, most beautiful and most interesting of the past 1000 years is, there will be no single correct answer for this question. Some will choose the Eiffel Tower while others might choose the high skyscrapers as the most remarkable buildings.

The Fuller Building in New York is one of the world earliest skyscrapers which was built in 1902 with a height of 285 feet. A solid steel skeleton that has been used during the construction of this building allowed it to achieve record-breaking height without the need for wide supporting walls at the foundation. Examples of advanced construction building in the world now are the CCTV headquarters in China, Burj Khalifa in Dubai and the Iconic Tower in the new capital city of Egypt; the New Administrative City. With a total structural height of 385.8 metres, it is the tallest building in Africa. It will comprise 80 floors, mostly for office use, and is one of 20 towers being built as part of the Central business district in the new capital city. The new city is located 45 kilometres east of Cairo and just outside the Second Greater Cairo Orbital Road. According to the plans, the city will become the new administrative and financial capital of Egypt, housing the main government departments and ministries, as well as foreign embassies. On 700 square kilometres total area, it would have a population of 6.5 million people, though it is estimated that the figure could rise to seven million. Officially, a major reason for the undertaking of the project was to relieve congestion in Cairo, which is already one of the world's most crowded cities, with the population of Greater Cairo expected to double in the next few decades.

The Egyptians have witnessed a historic procession of their country's ancient rulers through the capital, Cairo; an event that drew the attention of the entire world, for a procession befitting the grandiose ancient Egyptian civilization. The mummies - 22 royal mummies and 17 royal coffins, dating back to the 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th Dynasties; 18 of the mummies are for kings and 4 of them belong to queens, were transported from the peach-colored, neo-classical Egyptian Museum to their new resting place 5km away.

With tight security arrangements, the mummies were relocated to the new National Museum of Egyptian Civilisation in what is called The Pharaohs' Golden Parade. They were transported with great fanfare in chronological order of their reigns - from the 17th Dynasty ruler, Seqenenre Tao II, to Ramses IX, who reigned in the 12th Century BC. One of the main attractions of Saturday's event is King Ramses II, the most famous pharaoh of the New Kingdom, who ruled for 67 years and is remembered for signing the first known peace treaty. Another is Queen Hatshepsut, or Foremost of Noble Ladies who became ruler even though the customs of her time were that women did not become pharaohs. Each mummy was carried on a decorated vehicle fitted with special shock-absorbers and surrounded by a motorcade, including replica horse-drawn war chariots. The mummies were discovered in 1881 and 1898 in two caches in the ruins of Thebes, Egypt's ancient capital - modern day Luxor in Upper Egypt. They were housed in the iconic Egyptian Museum and visited by tourists from around the world for the past century.
